Sorgerà to Miami, in the exclusive district of Surfside, the first building built by the studio Antonio Citterio Patricia Viel in the United States: the Italian architect - known throughout the world for its iconic projects like the Bulgari Hotel in Milan, Dubai , London and Bali and the Mandarin Oriental in Milan - is working on a new luxury residential complex that will be inaugurated in 2018. Antonio Citterio's artwork will extend over 15,000 square meters, with over 4,000 square feet of private oceanfront beach.

Citterio was inspired by the strong architectural tradition of Miami, particularly in the style of the 1930s. The exterior of the building is divided into a series of large terraces, built as real outdoor rooms. For exteriors, the architect chose to use Roman travertine and oak wood, reflecting sunlight and, over time, gaining charm and character. Brass elements were used in the fixtures, to counteract the clear shades of stone and wood.

Art residents will have a range of top-notch services, such as indoor and outdoor pools, a spa, gym, tennis court and golf simulator, as well as a clubhouse that will be on the opposite side of the street. The lush surrounding landscape is designed by Enzo Enea, a renowned landscape architecture studio. The garden represents the ideal continuation of spa spaces. In front of the building, ART artist's sculptures by Robert Indiana.

Art will be one of the flagships of Surfside, the neighborhood lying between South Beach and Bal Harbor, which has been attracting the attention of architects around the world for some time. Prior to Citterio, Richard Meier and Renzo Piano chose this' Area for their author architectures.
